This site gives you an overview of what Photoshop can do, what it does well, and what it does not do. We explain the different functions so you can begin to use the program, customize it, and build professional-quality images. We do not provide tutorial files because we feel that it is better for you to discover it for yourself rather than be spoon fed information. Photoshop supports up to eight image layers, each with its own unique layer characteristics. The layers are separated by color, which allows you to combine multiple color images into one color image layer. Layers are simply three-dimensional "panels" stacked together, and when combined together, they become an image that is one color. You can add, modify, erase, hide, and even undo layers. Layer styles in Photoshop make it possible to apply color, or add effects to text and images, and they allow you to transform a design by obscuring parts of the image. There are many other layer functions in Photoshop. In the following text, you'll find tips on how to use Photoshop in different ways to create the best imagery. You'll learn what Photoshop is and how it works, as well as the basics of managing layers and digital workflow. You'll also find out how to create and edit content for most uses. Adobe Photoshop What It Does Everyone uses Photoshop to produce raster images. These are the images that you see on your monitor and are used in creating printed materials. Additionally, Photoshop is widely used to create cartoons, figures, logos, and other graphics for websites, in print media, and on signage. Photoshop can also be used to create a host of other graphics such as: Logos Custom Web Graphics Illustrations Vector Images Stocks Illustrations Photographs Signs Photorealistic Graphics Multimedia Motion Graphics You can create a variety of raster images using Photoshop, but you can also use some of Photoshop's advanced features to create vector images. Vector images are based on mathematical shapes, such as circles, squares, or rectangles. They can be scalable to any size without losing quality, and they can be used as the basis for complex graphics. You can use Photoshop to create raster and vector images. Vector is all about math, but using a raster image is easy to do because you simply draw an image. A raster image is

Hector the Wildcat Hits Heart of College After three years on the Crimson Tide bench, four Southeastern Conference games and one conversation, you'd think Nick Saban had little-to-no confidence in his running back from a Wildcat formation. Following his 21-yard scoring run in the first quarter at Arkansas, however, it seems he's in need of more than just a few words from the coach, as Mason Foster just sat down and went nuts. Alabama running back T.J. Yeldon is no stranger to a full-court press, but this one is a whole different deal. Hi I'm new here and I had a question or two for you. I've played pretty much all the games you've gotten, and I enjoy them, but I have a question (maybe 2?) about games like FTL that use their Survival mode as their main mode, and not just a side thing. If you press F3 in-game or click on the help file, it will tell you that no we don't "know" anything about the real story, but in Survival mode you can explore the ship. Meaning you can go into rooms, look at rooms and stuff. But what if someone built a type II Civilization in the game? How will the player know they are there? Would there be a button to show them? Or would they just assume there is something there because no one ever told them there wasn't? This isn't a put down. I'm just curious, I think that this is what most people want, but nobody has really talked about how that could work. BTW I love FTL. Glad you've played it. thejmk2012 3 years ago Spam that just makes the forum look sucky-wack (Actually I just made the colors negative just because that was the best I could come up with, and also mostly this forum looks like it is.) Larax 3 years ago I'm guessing that would be the "AI Exploration" or something like that. That's how I always imagined and thought of FTL. It's survival and then the AI travels around finding stuff to look for. Not that the ships have to be able to see things, but it's a good way to have the AI explore the world. But that all seems like it would be really really horrible. FTL is not just a

Q: How to apply style to Html page by a js function I have a piece of code that I want to apply a class with a given font size to a given id. I already wrote the function that will make the id changes, and the class changing. function addClass(myID, myClass, myFont) { var myClasses = document.getElementById(myID).classList; var myFonts = document.getElementById(myID).getAttribute("font-size"); myClasses.add(myClass); myClasses.add(myClass); myClasses.remove(myClass); myClasses.remove(myClass); myClasses.add(myFont); myClasses.remove(myFont); document.getElementById(myID).classList.add(myClass); document.getElementById(myID).getAttribute("font-size").setAttribute("font-size", myFont); } I have this function inside a button's onclick event. That button is inside a specific view of a struts 1.3 page. I tried giving the javascript function (that is just a function, NOT a function in an object), an ID and I think its actually used it but it's not. I tried to give it the function name, and that's also not working. How to apply that style? Thanks A: Here is a function that will add an ID and then add the specified class: function addClass(id, className, fontSize) { var idClasses = document.getElementById(id).classList; var idFontSize = document.getElementById(id).getAttribute("font-size"); var classNameString = className + " " + idFontSize; idClasses.add(className); idClasses.add(className); idClasses.remove(className); idClasses.remove(className); idClasses.add(idFontSize);
